PRESIDENT WILSON COMPLETES HIS PEPLY ON FIUME. ON ITS WAY NOW

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—President Wilson today completed his reply to the Allies on the Adriatic dispute and placed it in the hands of Acting Secretary of State Polk for transmission to Europe.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—President Wilson's reply to the Supreme Council on the Adriatic settlement probably will be forwarded today it was learned at the White House. The President it was learned it working on the reply in his study where he formulated his famous note to Germany. He is dictating to a stenographer. Before his illness he usually wrote his international correspondence himself on a typewriter. The Allied reply decoded and placed in Wilson's hands last night was said at the White House today to approximate the same length as the President's note preceding it, between two and three thousand words.

Wilson handled the reply to the Allied note entirely without advice so far as it could be ascertained. The speed with which he formulated his reply resembled the way he handled the rapid exchange of notes previous to the Armistice. The Supreme Council's note asking the President for suggestions in settling the Fiume question was handed to the President last evening. The President has decided not to make public the correspondence between himself and the Supreme Council until after the Adriatic situation has been satisfactorily adjusted.

LONDON, Feb. 19—Comment on the Adriatic dispute was veering again today. Newspapers pointed out that President Wilson cannot expect to dictate Europe's policies unless he carries out the responsibilities granted him at Paris. Both the press and the public are anxiously awaiting the reaction of the American capital to the Allied communication. Meanwhile there was criticism of the Council of Premier's determination in refusing to make public the text of the note. The newspapers demanded publication declaring the situation was of such importance that the people were entitled to know every move.

ROME, Feb. 18—President Wilson's "futile interference in European affairs is utterly inexplicable in view of the fact that the American Senate is so repulsive to European interference in the United States," the Corriere D'Italia said today. The press believes that Wilson's note has delayed settlement of the Adriatic problem. Politicians said the President's action will also delay carrying out of the government's international program.

OPERATORS SAY R. R. ADMINISTRATION TO BLAME FOR MINERS LOW EARNINGS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—Increases in the cost of coal to the consumer since the war have been caused by advanced operating cost, due to wage advances, strikes, intermittent car supply and augmented overhead expenses, T. H. Watkins, New York, president of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Corporation today told the Senate coal committee.

The 14 per cent. increase in wages recently granted bituminous coal miners would never have been necessary or demanded by the men if adequate transportation facilities had been afforded the mines to allow consistent operation, Mr. Watkins said, adding that no further wage increases to miners would be justified.

Mr. Watkins said railroad officials estimated it would cost $3,700,000,000 to provide necessary rolling stock to handle coal alone when the roads are turned back to private management.

Several coal operators have been forced into bankruptcy by the railroad administration, Mr. Watkins alleged, through the policy of confiscating coal and withholding payment for it for long periods.

Dr. H. A. Garfield, formerly fuel administrator, informed the coal strike settlement commission today that pressure of private matters rendered it almost prohibitive for him to testify before the commission.

LABOR DECIDES TO OPPOSE ESCH-CUMMINS RAILROAD CONTROL BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—Labor today decided to fight the Esch-Cummins bill which provides for regulation of the railroads after their return to their owners March 1. While this decision was being reached at the American Federation of Labor headquarters here today railroad executives were meeting with Rail Director Hines to discuss wages and other problems connected with the return of the railroads.

HITCHCOCK DECLARES TREATY WILL BE CAMPAIGN ISSUE THIS YEAR

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—The treaty is bound to go into the campaign, is the belief of Senator Hitchcock, Democratic leader, he said today. "From present indications I expect the treaty will be an issue in the campaign," said Hitchcock.

CLOSED SEASON FOR RINGNECK GROUSE URGE SPORTSMEN

Two years ago this coming spring, the State Game Commission liberated about one hundred Ringneck pheasants in the upper end of the county in the Curry Run-Bells Landing country. The birds were put out under the direction of Hon. G. W. Bell, who has carefully looked after them since that time, and reports them doing finely up until the present severe winter weather and deep snows, when the birds were forced to come into the farms for feed and are being taken care of by the sportsmen and farmers of that section.

The Ringneck pheasant subsists through the winter largely upon weeds, and when the deep snows covered the weeds, he was forced to seek food elsewhere. These birds are getting a fine start in the section mentioned and at several other points throughout the county, and if given the chance they deserve and should have, the game covers of the county will soon be as thickly populated by these hardy and handsome game birds as they were with the native ruffed grouse a few short years ago.

Ringneck pheasants have been protected in Clearfield county the past two years, which of course accounts in great measure for the present splendid success of their propagation here. By reason of having to come into the farms to be fed this winter the birds will of course become pretty well tamed or accustomed to man, and it is thought that should the ban be lifted and the season opened next fall, they would soon be killed off, and, to prevent this and give the birds a little more chance to increase the sportsmen of that region have unanimously agreed to attempt to again have the county closed to the shooting of Ringneck pheasants for another two years. With that desired end in view, several petitions are being circulated among the sportsmen of the county, asking the Game Commission to keep Clearfield county closed against the shooting of Ringnecks until the season of 1921.

This should be done, especially in view of the fact that the bird hunter may hunt the native pheasant during that time.

With two more closed seasons for Ringneck pheasants, with the additional birds to be placed in the county by the State Game Commission during that time, the Ringneck pheasant will be firmly established by the season of 1922, and there will then be a chance for the native grouse to increase while the newcomer is furnishing sport for the bird hunter.

C. C. A. A. WILL MEET TONIGHT TO RATIFY RULES AND BYLAWS

Clearfield sportsmen are beginning to see the folly of hit or miss sports and athletics and are taking steps to form an athletic association of a substantial nature, which will be in a position to throw organized strength behind the promotion of all kinds of sport events. The proposed organization will foster and promote all kinds of games, matches and exhibitions, and one of the objects of forming the association at this time, is to lay the groundwork now for a good representative baseball team here this coming season.

At a recent meeting of the organization, a temporary organization was affected and at a subsequent meeting held Tuesday evening, a committee on constitution and by-laws was appointed and the committee instructed to have their report ready for presentation to the members this evening for ratification, amendment or rejection.

The committee held a meeting last evening and drafted the laws to govern the business of the organization, and Temporary President M. A. Furrell, has called the meeting to ratify for this evening at the Arbitration Room in the Court House, at eight o'clock.

It is hoped that every member will be present at the meeting this evening, as there are some very important matters to be decided upon by the membership.

Every lover of clean sport in Clearfield should attend the meeting this evening. It is a step in the right direction and should result in many wholesome events being staged here this year.

The constitution and by-laws were framed by Messrs. L. A. Banta, A. Mitchell Chase, Esq., and G. A. Stewart.

RAIL RETURN WILL BRING MAN CUT

Officials Said To Be Planning For Dropping Of Many Red Tape Unwinders

CAN LAY OFF 100,000 MEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—If the tentative plans of the railroad managers go through the return of the roads to private ownership on March 1 will clear the way for the dismissal of thousands of men added to the payrolls since the government took over the carriers in December, 1917.

The estimates of the number of men it will be possible to dispense with without lowering efficiency varies from 100,000 named by conservatives to thrice that number mentioned by others.

The programme is to squeeze out all whose employment can be credited up as a result of government operation, and incidental to what the railroad men say is the lowering of individual efficiency inseparable from government ownership or control.

How Payrolls Were Boosted

According to the figures submitted by Director General Hines to the Senate committee on Interstate Commerce, the number of railroad employees in December, 1917, was 1,703,684. In fifteen months, up to March, 1919, the last figures made

A DOUBLE HEADER IN BASKETBALL TOMORROW NIGHT

C. H. S. considers their basket ball team equal to any other quintet in the league, so when Reynoldsville informed the manager that sickness had left them with but one player, the game scheduled for Friday evening was called off. The Reynoldsville-Brookville game was called off last week on account of sickness, but having received no word from the former that they would be unable to play this week, Manager Ventres proceeded to advertise the expected game in his usual thorough manner.

Therefore, knowing that a great many local fans would be disappointed if the promised game were not forthcoming, Manager Ventres immediately got in touch with several schools, and in a few hours from the time of receiving Reynoldsville's notification, he had filled the open date. Houtzdale Union High happened to be free this week, so an arrangement was made whereby their five will play in the place of Reynoldsville. But Union High has a girls' team that has already won quite a reputation for itself, and when the girls heard that C. H. S. had a quintet of female basket tossers who were looking for a ga , they immediately issued a challenge. As result there will be a double-header staged in the local gym Friday evening.

Houtzdale is reported as having a very strong team with lots of speed and good team work. They have already defeated several strong teams and are now playing first class basket ball. With a game that promises so much in the line of good playing, and the added attraction of the first girls' game to be played on the High School floor, Clearfield fans will certainly not be disappointed in the evening's activities. It may not be a league game, but it will be full of league pep.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Graham, at their home on Tenth street, Sunday last, a baby girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Bumgardner and children have been quite ill with scarlet fever.

A CALL TO PRAYER

"The World to Christ We Bring"

The Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions, and the Council of Women for Home Missions, unite in a call to Prayer, asking that the women of the churches observe the first Friday of the Lenten season, February 20, 1920, as a nation-wide Day of Prayer. In every city, town, hamlet and church the Day of Prayer is being observed. Clearfield is in line. The people of Clearfield are urged to meet in the Baptist church, at from 3 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and at 7:30 in the evening, in order to join in union with all Evangelical denominations in America, and the Christian World, prostrate before God pleading in behalf of Missions, Home and Foreign.

Our best informed and most ardent missionary men and women will be on the program, and it promises to be the greatest Missionary service, in which all churches are united, ever held in Clearfield. A most urgent invitation is extended to the public. Come! It will be wonderful, and we believe helpful to all.

At the evening service an offering for the Near East Relief will be lifted. "We'll crowd thy gates with thankful songs."

DAVIS FAMILY SORELY STRICKEN

Mr. and Mrs. George Pelton, of West Side, were notified by wire yesterday, of the death of their nephew, Leroy Davis, aged 18 months, which occurred at Oil City. This made the third death in the Davis family within a week, the mother and another son having passed away on Monday of last week. Mrs. Davis was formerly Elizabeth Pelton, of Morrisdale.

CONGRESS WRESTLING WITH [illegible] OF REPLACING DISABLED [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—To determine whether a President is disabled to such an extent that he is unable to perform the duties of his office would be left to open official inquiry by the cabinet according to the terms of a bill introduced in the House today by Representative McAdam, of Illinois.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—A Congressional inquiry to determine exactly what steps should be taken to meet any further emergency caused by the serious and long continued illness of a Chief Executive probably will result from the action of Representative Fess of Ohio in introducing in the House a "presidential disability" amendment to the constitution. Pending a complete investigation by the House Judiciary committee on the constitutional and the legal aspects of the situation and the amendment he proposes. He is prepared to lay before the committee the result of the exhaustive study he made on this point. Democrats believe that this amendment is more of a political move in view of President Wilson's illness rather than to meet any emergency and for this reason passage of this or a similar one at this session of Congress appears unlikely. A two-thirds vote of both houses is necessary for the passage of the amendment. Fess is chairman of the Republican congressional Campaign committee.

INJUNCTION HALTS SACTIFICE SALE OF GERMAN SHIPS TO [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—A temporary injunction against the sale of ex-German passenger liners by the United States Shipping Board was granted today by Justice Bailey of the District of Columbia.

Hearing on the question will be held later, possibly some time next week. Bailey declared that the present laws give Congress or the President or any of his appointees no power to sell the ships. This question, Bailey said, was the only one raised by the government in opposing the sale.

"HEMLOCK SPECIAL" [illegible] GRAMPIANITE'S HARD [illegible]

We sort of promised ourselves some time since that we would refrain from further recording the weird wanderings of Supt. Johnson's Tyrone & Clearfield branch hemlock especial, but yesterday afternoon's happening jarred us loose from our resolution and we are forced to offend once again in this connection.

That infamous old string of derelict, dilapidated, dusty, dingy and disreputable passenger cars making up the "hemlock special" rolled out of Clearfield station yesterday at 1:15 for Tyrone on time—once. Everything was moving as easily and smoothly as one of Woodrow's nonstickable cabinets. The turn at the brewery was reached in due time and proper order but that is as far as this tale proceeds smoothly.

A passenger who got on the train at Grampian supporting himself on one side by one of those old-fashioned pump handle wooden legs got dry when he saw how dusty the brewery looked and started back to the water tank to endeavor to coax a drink out of the ancient water cooler. As "old peggy" reached the region of the tank the car took the curve and the passenger was tossed over against the side of the car. He came down pretty strong on his timber leg which was too much for the time-worn, worm eaten flooring and the business end of the "peg" continued on down through. The exploring hickory point stuck its nose right through the ancient hose into the mechanism of the air-brake coupling and despite the most strenuous efforts of its owner positively refused to be pulled out.

The train stopped [illegible] them it takes to fill [illegible] and the fun started. Woman Lawyer B. C.

That modern woman lawyers and even Portia celebrated from the "Merchant of Venice" had their prototypes in ancient days is the evidence to be found on ancient Babylonian tablets now preserved in the British museum. On these tablets it is given as a matter of interest that in the year 2000 B. C. a woman appeared in the high court of Babylon and pleaded her own cause without assistance from any man.

Memorial Day takes on a deeper and richer significance since we have added hundreds of veterans to the rolls of our dead and living defenders. The Progress would like to see a proper and fitting observance of the day and begs at this time to review to some extent the suggestions made last year. First, we believe that it will add to the pleasure of the occasion to hold the memorial exercises in the morning instead of the afternoon when the hot sun is beating down on bared heads of the crowds. Second, there are hundreds of people who would like to go to the cemetery to enjoy the exercises who cannot walk there in the heat of the day but who would go in the morning. Third, although the day is more than three months off it is not tooearly for the committee to line up at least one prominent and able speaker for the occasion. There is a great demand for able orators on this day and right now the committee can have the pick of the field. Fourth, the committee should recognize that the young people will demand the afternoon of the holiday for sports, entertainment and amusement and since it is most desirable that these young people be in attendance at the exercises there would seem to be only one way to have them there and that way is to hold the exercises in the morning.

There is in process of organization an association to be known as the Clearfield County Athletic Association. Its purpose is the promotion of sports of all kinds and the encouragement of clean athletics.

We believe that, properly directed, this organization can be the instrument of bringing adequate wholesome entertainment to the people of this community at a nominal cost and that it deserves the hearty support of every lover of baseball, skating, basket ball, boxing, wrestling and kindred sports.

Hearty support of its purposes does not mean financial support entirely but to get the thing going will require the attendance of every sport lover at the meeting called for tonight at which the constitution and bylaws will be presented for ratification. Of even greater importance is attendance at the election of officers to be held in the near future.

The organization is not for profitmaking and its every activity will be for the promotion of the best sporting events at the least cost.

Let every sportsman boost and let the knockers knock.

There has been general complaint about town relative to the speed and reckless manner in which one of the Atlanttic Refining Company's trucks is usually driven over the streets of Clearfield. On several occasions recently we saw this truck traveling up and down Second street at a gait and in a manner to cause spectators to marvel that it got by without accident. We mentioned the matter in The Progress last evening with the idea in mind that possibly this reckless driving was thoughtlessly done and the driver would take the hint and exercise more care and caution in the future.

We evidently sized our man up wrong as he is no doubt of the opinion he can drive over the streets to suit himself regardless of the rights of anybody or everybody else. He called the office this morning and asked what business it was of The Progress how he drove his truck. We have arranged to have Mayor Chase invite this young man to a session in the Mayor's office Friday evening next at 8 o'clocfl at which time and place we propose to tell him just what business it is of ours.

We believe this young man needs to be informed as to what his rights are, and also that the rest of the people of this community have some rights on the streets of the town. We do this in his interest as well as in the interest of the public welfare.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—In a base hospital at Neuilly, France, his face disfigured beyond recognition, an American soldier serving in the French army attracts attention by his deep despondency. Asked by the surgeons for a photograph to guide them in making over his face, he offers in derision a picture of the Savior, bidding them take that as a model. They do so, making a remarkable likeness.

CHAPTER II.—Invalided home, on the boat he meets Martin Harmon, New York broker, who is attracted by his remarkable features. The ex-soldier gives his name as "Henry Hilliard," and his home as Syracuse, New York. He left there under a cloud, and is embittered against his former fellow townsmen. Harmon makes him a proposition to sell mining stocks in Syracuse, concealing his identity. He accepts it, seeing in it a chance to make good and prove he has been underestimated.

CHAPTER III.—In Syracuse "Hilliard" (in reality Richard Morgan) is accepted as a stranger. He visits James Cullen, a former employer, relating a story of the death of Richard Morgan, and is surprised at the regret shown by Cullen and his youthful daughter Angela. While at the Cullen home Carol Durant, Morgan's former fiancee, makes a call.

CHAPTER IV.

She had always been, when he last saw her, the outstanding beauty of Syracuse, but he was astounded to behold what the interval of two years had done for her. She had taken upon herself a new maturity; her figure, exceptionally graceful, was still slender; but suggestive of a more womanly, a more inclusive charm.

He was being presented to her! He, who had kissed her a thousand times, was undergoing the ritual of presentation!—and she was smiling at him with those grave, sweet eyes of hers, and calling him by his adopted name! His mask of protection had never seemed so slight, so insufficient; the fragrance of her, and the illusion caused by this, threatened his balance and set his nerves on edge; fortunately, the routine of the conventions intervened to save him from his inarticulateness. For one thing, there was the rite of introduction to Armstrong, and after that there was a dash of promiscuous conversation, with not a little weather philosophy in it. Then came the inexorable hush caused by the presence of a stranger whose fads and fancies are still a matter of conjecture, and out of that hush, a question, and Hilliard was suddenly visited by a species of self-hypnosis.

If he had been moved at all by the sight of Angela, whom he had loved as a younger sister, he was, by comparison, shaken as by a whirlwind by the sight of Carol Durant, whom he had loved as a woman. Not on the train, not at the hotel, not even when he witnessed Angela's severe grief, had he remotely conceived that this instant would be so difficult to surmount. What in New York had seemed a regeneration, and earlier on this same evening had appeared a very dubious deception, was rapidly taking upon itself the color of irremediable wrong. His imagination was aroused beyond belief; and as he stared in dumb suspense at Carol, recalling a thousand episodes and a thousand privileges of the long ago, he was preyed upon by a slow-stealing grimness of despair which left him sick with misery.

She was waiting for an answer—and the others were waiting, too, and watching him. He felt that guilt was stamped on his every feature . . . he felt that every thought of his must be as crystal to the four who waited for him to speak.

He was himself and he was not himself; he was ostensibly Henry Hilliard, a man in whom it couldn't be suspected that the heart and soul of Dicky Morgan were embodied; he was transcendentalist; a spectator at his own funeral. Sight of the Croix de Guerre of poor Pierre Dutout, who in bequeathing that impressive bit of bronze to him, hadn't dreamed that he was leaving a heritage of chicanery along with it, engendered in Hilliard a thrill which nearly found its outlet in a paroxysm of wild laughter. And the newspaper, with Dutout's most genuine citation in it! And the old passport photograph which he had hidden for fear that his real name, indorsed on it, might be cabled home, together with proof to the world that he hadn't been a hero—that he had failed in this, as in every other undertaking of his life. And all the dates in accuracy! And if anyone cared to trace back the story, where was the flaw? Where was there a loophole? And who would recognize Dick Morgan in his cloak and mask of utter miracle?

Who had?

Lightninglike, his brain included all the salient items of the picture in a single flash. There was Dicky Morgan, sailing away to France—which could be proved. There was a number, and a name attached to it, and—since Hilliard's sturdy defense of

"I suffered from stomach trouble for 8 years—had acute indigestion for 4 years. All that time I have not slept a wink before 2 in the morning, and lived on milk and soup. My stomach was one solid sore.

"Doctors said I had catarrh and neuralgia of the stomach, also female trouble for which I needed an operation. I was nothing but a living skeleton and had given up hope.

"Then my husband brought home a bottle of Milks Emulsion. From the second dose, I began eating, and now, after 10 bottles, I eat anything I want. I haven't had a pain in my stomach since the first dose, and my female trouble is fast disappearing."—Mattie Cartwright, Tyler, Texas.

The blessed relief which Milks Emulsion gives in stomach trouble, is only part of its good work. The benefit is both prompt and lasting. It costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. It helps build flesh and strength, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. Truly wonderful for weak, sickly children.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions and if not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers —Meat forms uric acid.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

public, the number increased 139,846 to 1,843,530. In this period on the Pennsylvania alone, the increase was in excess of 40,000, the number employed on the lines east of Pittsburgh increasing from 141,779 to 172,150, and on the lines west of Pittsburgh from 62,720 to 78,535.

Some of this increase was due to the extension of the eigth-hour day to shop and other employees, the men actually engaged in the operation of trains having been on that basis under private management. The balance of the increase, according to railroad men, represents the cost in efficiency of government administration

It is not pretended by the railroad men that this let-down in efficiency is peculiar to the railroads. They say it is to be found in all classes of labor, but that in none is it found to the extent manifested in their industry. So far as is humanly possible, they say, they purpose to get rid of it by dismissing superfluous or extra men wherever found and the abolition of superfluous jobs.

No Cut in Wages—Now

This cleaning up of the payrolls is urged as necessary if the roads are to be put back on a business basis. Otherwise, it is declared, it will be impossible to get anything like old-time efficiency.

That these plans have been under consideration for some time past is admitted by railroad officials. They deprecate publicity at this time and rather resent reports circulating in Wall street for weeks that the roads propose to "liquidate labor." These reports, it is asserted, are unfortunate in that they serve to give the impression of an intention to reduce wages. This is not at this time under consideration, though there is the highest authority for saying that something akin to it is under consideration of some managers.

This something is reclassification of employes. Under the administration of the railroads by the government the tendency has been to classify labor upward. By this is meant that employees, rated as laborers or something a little better and paid accordingly have had their wages increased not by increasing the rates for their classification, but by putting them in higher classes. In this way, it is now pointed out, the appearance of increasing wages was avoided, but the effect was obtained.

This in itself, railroad men now assert, is responsible for much of the inefficiency and not a little of the dissatisfaction on the part of the more skilled employees. Many who have spent long apprenticeships and acquired a high degree of skill at their trades have resented the wiping out of differentials between them and less skilled men and also the inclusion in their ratings of men not of their skill. In these circumstances, railroad men say, a let up in efficiency and in production has been inevitable.

There is also a question if the management of some of the smaller roads in the less densely populat d sections of the country, where living costs are not to be compared with those in congested centres, will not seek for some way in which they can avoid paying the present high rates under the standard classifications put into effect by the government. It is, they assert, unfair to compel a poor road with small earnings to pay the same for work in a Vermont town, where living costs are low, as larger roads with high earnings are asked to pay in congested centres like New York or Chicago, where living costs are high.

This, however, is a question that, for the present, will be permitted to wait in the hope that some way out short of a reduction that will be sure to involve labor troubles, can be found. One posible way is for these roads to allow the present wage rates for old employees to stand, but paying lesser rates to such new men as may be put on from time to time.

Labor Makes no Protest

That the roads contemplate a reduction in forces is well understood in labor circles. Oddly enough, in some labor quarters the necessity of those interested in the management that there are many superfluous employes on the payrolls is confirmed.

"The rolls have been padded," said well known labor man asserted today, "by managers interested mainly in making government management appear impossible than in actually running their roads. There are railroad yards where there are many yardmasters than there are yard hands. Men have been placed in many places just to take care of them, and at the same time discredit the system. These men should go—they never should have been employed.

"The roads have also taken advantage of the fact that Uncle Sam is paying the bills to do a lot of things they should have done when the properties were privately managed. They won't continue to do this work. This leaves the way open for the laying off of other men. The fact that the roads go back in better shape than when they were taken over will allow for the laying off of more men.

"It is absolutely unfair for the roads to cary ink cincy now when that and not efficiency is what they sought in the period of government control."

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Young, at their home on South Side, the day this week, a daughter.

John Eckert, wife and child, residing near Naulton, are all down suffering from an attack of the influenza, bordering on pneumonia.

In glancing over an old paper, from a volume of The Clearfield County Times, printed in this place in January, 1873, we noticed a paragraph reading as follows: "For several days snow has been falling steadily, and measuring it with what was already on the ground, the depth is a trifle over four feet. Timber sticks and logs in the woods are hidden from sight and it is almost an impossibility to locate them, thereby retarding those who have long timber, in getting it to the river. Previous to this last snow fall, it was not an uncommon sight to see one hundred teams passing down Main street in the late afternoon, each hauling from one to three sticks of timber to the landing place along the banks of the river, in the meadow above the wooden creek bridge, and from the Susquehanna House to below Arnoldtown. Huge piles of spruce lumber are being landed on the river bank below the Irvin grist mill, on the east shore of the stream. It is estimated that there are already two hundred rafts at their landing places, and just as soon as men and teams can get into the woods, fifty more rafts will be hauled to the river, ready for "rafting in" as soon as the river is clear from ice in the spring It is almost impossible for the folks living in the country to get to town for provisions and feed for their stock, as most of the roads are drifted full, some of them with twenty feet of snow, and it will take days to shovel a passage way through them. George Merrill, who is logging on the creek near Home Camp, was in town this week, and gave out the information that all work on his job was suspended, owing to the snow being so deep that it covered up all the logs in the woods, and that shovels would have to be used before they could be reached."

Do not forget citizens that tonight at 7:30 o'clock there will be a regular meeting of the Industrial and Community Association. All persons who are interested in the movement for the betterment of the town, should make it a point to be present and hear the reports of the different committees, who have "let no grass grow under their feet" the past couple of weeks. The McKinley orchestra will be present and enliven the meeting with excellent music. Even though you do not wish to join the association, go to the meeting and hear what is being done for you and your town, by those who are interested and determined to place the name of Curwensville in a conspicuous place on the map.

Alfred Long, one of the town's aged and highly esteemed citizens, is able to be around again and receive the congratulations of his friends. A few weeks ago this venerable old gentleman had the misfortune of falling down a stairway, turning two somersaults in his descent, and alighting on his head and shoulders, and sustaining other severe bruises on his body, from which, owing to his age and feebleness, many thought his recovery doubtful.

The Progress man here has been confined to his home all of the week and from all indications looks like a "shut-in" for the balance of the week. He is engaged in writing up a history of the town and its people, from the beginning until the present time.

DARKTOWN COLORED SOCIETY CIRCLES UPSOT

Wrigley Addition's creme de la creme of "Darktown Society," to the number of at least twenty-five, attended a spirited assault and battery hearing at 'Squire Chorpenning's court yesterday afternoon. The principals were colored ladies. It was sure some case, the evidence at times hitting the high places.

The "judge" with Solomon-like wisdom, after listening to the diametrically opposite stories of the contending sides, decided that each contestant was equally guilty and divided the costs. The disputants and their friends retired from the field dissatisfied, both sides declaring the end was not yet.

Offensive Breath Caused By Catarrh

MU-COL Best to Keep Down Odor And Restore Diseased Membranes to Normal

Doctors all over this country have used and prescribed MU-COL in severe catarrhal conditions of the mucous membranes of nose and throat. In some cases the noses had been stopped up for long periods; crusts had formed and mucous collected in cavities from which is ought normally to have been discharged.

Raw sore throats often resulted; the eyes became weak and watery; the breath foul, while the sense of smell was gradually disappearing.

The MU-COL method of treatment which is extremely easy to apply, quickly shows a decided improvement. All the disagreeable symptoms rapidly disappear. The eyes, the nose and the throat soon become free and clear because there is no more inflammation and Catarrh germs to cause it.

Don't delay. Get a bottle of MU-COL today and take pity on that Catarrh infested nose and throat.

Owe Their Health To

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—overwhelming indeed is the success of this great medicine. Compared with it, all other medicines for women's ills seem to be experiments.

Why is it so successful? Simply because of its sterling worth. For over forty years it has had no equal. Women for two generations have depended upon it with confidence.

Thousands of Their Letters are on our files, which prove these statements to be facts, not mere boasting.

Here Are Two Sample Letters:

Mother and Daughter Helped.

Middleburg, Pa.—"I am glad to state that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me much good when I was 35 years old. I was run down with female trouble and was not able to do anything, could not walk for a year and could not work. I had treatment from a physician but did not gain. I read in the papers and books about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. The first few bottles gave me relief and I kept on using it until I got better and was able to do my work. The Vegetable Compound also regulated my daughter when she was 15 years old. I can recommend Vegetable Compound as the best medicine I have ever used."—Mrs. W. YERGER, R. 3, Box 21, Middleburg, Pa.

Fall River, Mass.—"Three years ago I gave birth to a little girl and after she was born I did not pick up well. I doctored for two months and my condition remained the same. One day one of your little books was left at my door and my husband suggested that I try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it immediately and I felt better and could eat better after the first bottle, and I continued taking it for some time. Last year I gave birth to a baby boy and had a much easier time as I took the Vegetable Compound for four months before baby came. On getting up I had no pains like I had before, and no dizziness, and in two weeks felt about as well as ever."—Mrs. THOMAS WILKINSON, 288 Columbia Street, Fall River, Mass.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, forms toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

The Man Nobody Knew

Dicky Morgan had had a grain of truth in it, and one of the steps of his many sided progress carefully omitted—a name had really been assumed, and had endured from the date of enlistment to the date of discharge. It was the individual's recorded name in the army and at Neuilly—and it wasn't Morgan and it wasn't Hilliard and it wasn't Dutout. No one here knew it, or ever would know it; even Harmon didn't know it; it was the first sobriquet of a shell-torn individual who had been taken to Neuilly, and had been made whole again. No one at Neuilly had ever set eyes on Dicky Morgan's real face! But a certain man named Dutout had been decorated and died, and that could be proved—was proved! Hilliard had borrowed Dutout's name in perfect safety; and the trail was cold. And here was a fourth man, Hilliard—to take his word for it—and the world is larger than the curiosity of sincere people to encompass.

No—if a Neuilly surgeon ever told as one of the mysterious chapters of the war what had happened to a certain gloomy individual that summer, the name would suggest nothing. And as far as checking up the visits of a mythical Hilliard to a very real Dutout was concerned, who would profess to remember? The testimony of any single witness would be immaterial.

The voice of Carol Durant was echoing in Hilliard's ears, and Hilliard, yielding to a tidal wave of recklessness, and of swelling anger at imaginary wrongs, looked squarely into Carol's eyes, and spoke with winning urgency

"Yes," he said. "I have news of Morgan. In fact, I'm here in Syracuse solely because I have it. I've just been telling Mr. Cullen—and Miss Cullen—that I was with him when he died."

She didn't speak, at first; she merely looked at Hilliard and grew very white, and her lips quivered. Presently she swayed a little, and reached out with her hand toward the back of a convenient chair. Armstrong stepped toward her, and Angela Cullen slipped an arm around her waist.

"He's . . . dead?" she repeated, and her tone was not yet free from a certain incredulity, as though the fact were of itself impossible, and the statement of it subject to discussion.

"Yes, Miss Durant."

She moistened her lips; her eyes were very bright, unnaturally bright, so that Hilliard was fascinated, and appalled.

"You . . . You know that?" she asked, again with that queer inflexion of armored doubt.

"Yes, I know it."

The others were standing as statues; Mr Cullen, snatching at the first idea of consolation to present itself, fumbled for his daughter's other hand, which still retained the trophy a better man had won.

"Here's what they gave him, Carol! Look! The Croix de Guerre! Don't let's think of anything but what he . . . let's be proud of him! I—"

"Oh, yes," she said inertly, and took the cross in her palm. She dropped her eyes for a moment, then raised them to the level of Hilliard's. "Didn't he send some word to me?"

"No." Hilliard's nod was very ministerial. "No, I'm sorry, but—"

Her eyebrows lifted, and her nostrils dilated the merest trifle. Her breath was coming more rapidly now; she was nearing the breaking point of her resistance, and all of them knew it. The moment was agonizedly prolonged. Hilliard, gazing without a quaver at the girl he had thought he loved beyond all else in this world or the next, was singularly relaxed as he observed her symptoms. She had really cared, then . . . so much the greater pity that she hadn't kept him caring . . . as she might.

"Can that be possible?" she said, hardly above a whisper.

"I'm sorry—but—"

"I wouldn't have believed it could be true." She gave a long, tremulous breath, and looked about her, half-dazed and half-perceptive. Her eyes strayed back to Hilliard. "Tell me about it," she said, almost inaudibly.

"Carol, dear!" Angela was stimulated to active sympathy. "Sit down—please! Oh, Mr. Hilliard!"

"No—yes, I . . . I'll sit down!" Her eyes seemed magnetized to Hilliard's. "Only I want to hear—I want to hear!"

"Tell her from the beginning," said Cullen, mopping his forehead. Get a glass of water . . . anything else, Carol?"

She shook her head. "Tell me!" she said. "I want to know!"

So that Hilliard, inspirited by the realization that he was under the protectorate of the shadows, and gathering fresh assurance with every sentence, went through that tragic narrative a second time. And as he told the tale of Dicky Morgan, he was greatly engulfed by the surge of Dicky Morgan's grievances; his voice trembled with righteousness; he gradually lost his loathing for the part he played, and played it with every atom of his energy; he was a defendant, and a witness and a judge for Dicky Morgan all in one—and his verdict was for acquittal. Miss Durant's eyes never left his face.

"And that," she said presently, "is all there is to tell?"

"That's the end," said Hilliard simply. And in the long hiatus which followed, he was wondering . . . wondering . . . vague aimless thoughts, with no beginning and no conclusive outcome, but the central figure, flitting, elusive, was always Carol Durant. He told himself fiercely that he hated her, that for two vengeful years he had hated her, that he had come back to Syracuse primarily to see her again, with his whole soul for the wounds in his heart, the wounds of his body, still . . . O God! why couldn't the surgeons have cut away his memory, and left him peace!

He was prodigiously relieved when Mr. Cullen, well-meaning but awkward, burted out a paradox of eulogy. Armstrong, eager to relieve the congested ways of thought, ventured into the realm of platitude—and something in his manner caught Hilliard's attention. The man was actually possessive—and Hilliard, having no envy of his possession, cursed him on general principles nevertheless. And then Hilliard was again in demand; there was a flood of incoherent questioning, and he was giving details, answering queries, volunteering information which might never have been asked, describing Neuilly, the hospital, the surgeons, the nurses, the wholly indescribable atmosphere of France in wartime. He was strengthening his position, phrase by phrase; his insouciance redoubled; he had laid a rock foundation never to be successfully assailed. There came an abrupt pause; Miss Durant rose and came to him, and he was on his feet to meet her.

"Thank you," she said, giving him her hands. His heart missed a beat; his blood ran gelid. "Thank you. If you can . . I wish you'd talk to me again before you go . . . alone . . . I wish it very much. You've made me . . . at least, I can be glad you were there . . . to help him, but I want to know so much more . . . so infinitely much more . . ."

A fleeting impulse clawed at Hilliard's judgment; he yielded to it blindly. It meant the alteration of his plan of action, it meant a trifle more of danger; and a gratuitous risk at that, but it was genius—genius!

"Miss Durant!" He made sure that the others were beyond the range of his voice. "Miss Durant! I said he sent no word to you; that was true as far as I knew the truth, but there's one letter he started to write—just at the last . . . it wasn't addressed to anyone: I didn't know who it was for. I brought it with me on the chance that I'd find out. I didn't want to speak of it before every one, because if it's yours, I thought you'd . . . you understand, don't you? I'm almost positive it was meant for you. It's only a few lines . . . he wasn't ever strong enough to finish it . . . I've got it at the hotel now. May I bring it to you tomorrow?"

She held her breath for an instant; her mouth quivered. She looked at him searchingly.

"Surely. I . . . I live just across on the corner, Mr. Hilliard. The brick house. Can you come early?"

"How soon?" He was telling himself that his former passions were atrophied; she was no longer able to disquiet him. His inspiration was commercial—strictly commercial.

"In the morning? At . . . eleven?"

"I'll come gladly."

"And . . . and I want to thank you now," she said in a tone which would have fallen as a blessing upon the ears of any other man alive, "for speaking as though you loved him. And for all you did for him. Perhaps you know already . . . perhaps you can't know . . . but I'm trying to tell you, because he was . . . he was one of my very dearest friends."

His brain snapped; he bent down to her.

"You loved him—too?" he said, uncontrollably.

"Yes," she said. "Once—I loved him, too!"

IN DURANCE

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

The youngest operative of the Fidelity Detective agency, Paul Dacre, felt quite complimented when his chief called him into his private office and said:

"Dacre, we want you to handle a case that may require considerable skill and care. There is a contingent fee of five thousand dollars, and if you succeed you get a 25 per cent bonus."

"I shall try to do my best," pledged Dacre, as his superior exhibited a photograph.

"That is a picture of Philip Norcom," proceeded the chief. "He lives at 22 Weller street, in a lonely old house. Once a week he leaves the house and goes to an art store, where he disposes of a newly made water-color sketch."

"And this Norcom is wanted?"

"Not at all. Here is the point. A young lady, Miss Viola Burt, has disappeared from the home of her guardian. She is somewhere in hiding. This Norcom is a former clerk of her dead father, from whom she inherited quite an estate. The presumption is that Norcom is keeping her in concealment. This is the young lady in question," and the chief produced the photo of an exquisitely beautiful young girl.

"We have had three men on the case, and all have blundered. Their object was to get into the house, to see if the young lady was an occupant. Number one spread some molasses on a sheet of heavy paper to paste it to a cellar window and smash his way in without making a noise. Number two bribed a man hired to clean a rug to roll him up in it and carry him into the house. Number three watched from the looped-up awning of a little store opposite, and picklocked the front door one midnight. All three, in turn, roamed over the house, from cellar to garret, and found no man—no girl.

"Then there is some secret, shut-off compartment, you think?" began Dacre.

"I don't think at all. That is for you to find out and act upon. You've got the points at issue. Find the girl, if she is there, and try to locate her elsewhere if Norcom knows where she is."

Dacre watched 22 Weller street for three days and nights, and all that time it did not show a sign of life. One night the original of the first photograph came out, a small package under his arm. Dacre trailed him to an art shop, saw him deliver the parcel, receive some money, and shadowed him back to the old mansion. Five evenings later, when the man started out on his regular mission, Dacre managed to force his way into the house, went all over it, and discovered not the slightest evidence of furnishment or occupancy.

Dacre came outside and crouched behind a fence. When Norcom returned he entered the house as usual, locking himself in. Dacre watched out for a light within the structure. None showed. Then a long shadow momentarily flitted across the side yard.

"The roof!" commented Dacre. All was now clear to him. The old building was a blind, and simply an avenue to an adjoining building.

It was an hour later when Dacre crossed that same roof, lifted a scuttle in one adjoining, and descended a ladder. He groped his way towards a light showing under a door, was suddenly seized from behind, a banded loop of steel encircled both wrists; he was pushed against the door, past it, and realized that he had stumbled into a trap. He saw a girl seated at an easel—she of the photograph. The man Norcom forced him past her into another room having barred windows, and Dacre found himself a helpless captive.

It was the next morning when the girl brought him his breakfast. He tried valuly to engage her in conversation. Norcom entered the room.

"Young man," he said austerely, "you are to remain here a prisoner for six days."

It was not until the third day that the young lady deigned to speak with Dacre. After that they became quite well acquainted. She even allowed him to sit in the room where she was engaged in her artistic labors. One day he recited frankly his connection with the case. She smiled wisely and, Dacre fancied, rather triumphantly.

"You will be glad when you know what underlies this search for me," she said, and Dacre, captivated by her grace and beauty, hoped so, too.

"We will go with you," announced Philip Norcom, the morning of the seventh day. He released his captive, led the way to the street and, hailing a taxicab, added quietly: Give your directions. We are your guests now."

It was to the chief that Norcom addressed himself when they arrived at his office. "It has been my privilege," he said, "to assist in hiding Miss Burt from her scheming guardian, who sought to divert her fortune, and I have succeeded. This day she is twenty-one and her own mistress; now she can defy an evil plotter who might have connived at her death, for all we know."

The guardian did not pay the opulent amount he had promised, so Paul Dacre did not share in the anticipated reward. He was better paid, however, for the acquaintance formed in durance blossomed into friendship, and that in time into love, which led Viola and himself to the altar.

Miss Laura Brooks has been confined to her home on West Sixth street, with tonsilitis.

ONE JAPANESE CUSTOM WHICH HAD BETTER NOT BE IMPORTED

Ex Oriente Lux! It was a Roman wiseacre who first observed the fact that from the East comes light.

A dispatch from Tokio anounces that the Mikado has sent a generous gift of large casks of sake to Prince Kuni and Marquis Hachisuka, who who recently lost their residences through fires of unknown origin. This, the dispatch further says, is an ancient custom, and many noblemen of high rank followed the Emperor's example. Considering the fact that sake—they call it "sakky" in Tokio—is somewhere around 15 per cent in its most popular alcoholic form, this is really SOME custom!

To grasp the full beauty of it, you need only translate it into American terms. Were the custom adopted in this country, you might read in the newspapers a few items like these:

"AKRON, Ohio—Zeb Jenk's house having burned down mysteriously during the night, the Mayor of Akron sent him a barrel of rye. The Board of Aldermen voted to send him six case of Bacardi rum."

"SYRACUSE, N. Y.—A fire of mysterious origin destroyed the home of Franklin Pooch, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, yesterday. Governor Smith telegraphed his condolences and sent Mr. Pooch a few jugs of applejack.

"The City Council meets tomorrow and will probably send him some champagne."

The possibilities of this custom stagger the imagination. One thought alone rises clearly in the bewildered mind, viz: What would become of the fire insurance companies?

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Look young! Nobody can tell if you use Grandmother's simple recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Tell Your Phone

Just tell your 'phone what you want from the drug store. We are on the other end of the wire capable of understanding your needs, fully capable of selecting your wants, and delivering them immediately. Telephone trading is a time-saving, bother-saving method. We are willing to do the delivering, if you are willing to give us your orders that way. We guarantee this service correct.

PRESIDENT WILSON COMPLETES HIS PEPLY ON FIUME. ON ITS WAY NOW

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—President Wilson today completed his reply to the Allies on the Adriatic dispute and placed it in the hands of Acting Secretary of State Polk for transmission to Europe.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—President Wilson's reply to the Supreme Council on the Adriatic settlement probably will be forwarded today it was learned at the White House. The President it was learned it working on the reply in his study where he formulated his famous note to Germany. He is dictating to a stenographer. Before his illness he usually wrote his international correspondence himself on a typewriter. The Allied reply decoded and placed in Wilson's hands last night was said at the White House today to approximate the same length as the President's note preceding it, between two and three thousand words.

Wilson handled the reply to the Allied note entirely without advice so far as it could be ascertained. The speed with which he formulated his reply resembled the way he handled the rapid exchange of notes previous to the Armistice. The Supreme Council's note asking the President for suggestions in settling the Fiume question was handed to the President last evening. The President has decided not to make public the correspondence between himself and the Supreme Council until after the Adriatic situation has been satisfactorily adjusted.

LONDON, Feb. 19—Comment on the Adriatic dispute was veering again today. Newspapers pointed out that President Wilson cannot expect to dictate Europe's policies unless he carries out the responsibilities granted him at Paris. Both the press and the public are anxiously awaiting the reaction of the American capital to the Allied communication. Meanwhile there was criticism of the Council of Premier's determination in refusing to make public the text of the note. The newspapers demanded publication declaring the situation was of such importance that the people were entitled to know every move.

ROME, Feb. 18—President Wilson's "futile interference in European affairs is utterly inexplicable in view of the fact that the American Senate is so repulsive to European interference in the United States," the Corriere D'Italia said today. The press believes that Wilson's note has delayed settlement of the Adriatic problem. Politicians said the President's action will also delay carrying out of the government's international program.

OPERATORS SAY R. R. ADMINISTRATION TO BLAME FOR MINERS LOW EARNINGS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18—Increases in the cost of coal to the consumer since the war have been caused by advanced operating cost, due to wage advances, strikes, intermittent car supply and augmented overhead expenses, T. H. Watkins, New York, president of the Pennsylvania Coal and Coke Corporation today told the Senate coal committee.

The 14 per cent. increase in wages recently granted bituminous coal miners would never have been necessary or demanded by the men if adequate transportation facilities had been afforded the mines to allow consistent operation, Mr. Watkins said, adding that no further wage increases to miners would be justified.

Mr. Watkins said railroad officials estimated it would cost $3,700,000,000 to provide necessary rolling stock to handle coal alone when the roads are turned back to private management.

Several coal operators have been forced into bankruptcy by the railroad administration, Mr. Watkins alleged, through the policy of confiscating coal and withholding payment for it for long periods.

Dr. H. A. Garfield, formerly fuel administrator, informed the coal strike settlement commission today that pressure of private matters rendered it almost prohibitive for him to testify before the commission.

LABOR DECIDES TO OPPOSE ESCH-CUMMINS RAILROAD CONTROL BILL

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—Labor today decided to fight the Esch-Cummins bill which provides for regulation of the railroads after their return to their owners March 1. While this decision was being reached at the American Federation of Labor headquarters here today railroad executives were meeting with Rail Director Hines to discuss wages and other problems connected with the return of the railroads.

HITCHCOCK DECLARES TREATY WILL BE CAMPAIGN ISSUE THIS YEAR

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—The treaty is bound to go into the campaign, is the belief of Senator Hitchcock, Democratic leader, he said today. "From present indications I expect the treaty will be an issue in the campaign," said Hitchcock.

CLOSED SEASON FOR RINGNECK GROUSE URGE SPORTSMEN

Two years ago this coming spring, the State Game Commission liberated about one hundred Ringneck pheasants in the upper end of the county in the Curry Run-Bells Landing country. The birds were put out under the direction of Hon. G. W. Bell, who has carefully looked after them since that time, and reports them doing finely up until the present severe winter weather and deep snows, when the birds were forced to come into the farms for feed and are being taken care of by the sportsmen and farmers of that section.

The Ringneck pheasant subsists through the winter largely upon weeds, and when the deep snows covered the weeds, he was forced to seek food elsewhere. These birds are getting a fine start in the section mentioned and at several other points throughout the county, and if given the chance they deserve and should have, the game covers of the county will soon be as thickly populated by these hardy and handsome game birds as they were with the native ruffed grouse a few short years ago.

Ringneck pheasants have been protected in Clearfield county the past two years, which of course accounts in great measure for the present splendid success of their propagation here. By reason of having to come into the farms to be fed this winter the birds will of course become pretty well tamed or accustomed to man, and it is thought that should the ban be lifted and the season opened next fall, they would soon be killed off, and, to prevent this and give the birds a little more chance to increase the sportsmen of that region have unanimously agreed to attempt to again have the county closed to the shooting of Ringneck pheasants for another two years. With that desired end in view, several petitions are being circulated among the sportsmen of the county, asking the Game Commission to keep Clearfield county closed against the shooting of Ringnecks until the season of 1921.

This should be done, especially in view of the fact that the bird hunter may hunt the native pheasant during that time.

With two more closed seasons for Ringneck pheasants, with the additional birds to be placed in the county by the State Game Commission during that time, the Ringneck pheasant will be firmly established by the season of 1922, and there will then be a chance for the native grouse to increase while the newcomer is furnishing sport for the bird hunter.

C. C. A. A. WILL MEET TONIGHT TO RATIFY RULES AND BYLAWS

Clearfield sportsmen are beginning to see the folly of hit or miss sports and athletics and are taking steps to form an athletic association of a substantial nature, which will be in a position to throw organized strength behind the promotion of all kinds of sport events. The proposed organization will foster and promote all kinds of games, matches and exhibitions, and one of the objects of forming the association at this time, is to lay the groundwork now for a good representative baseball team here this coming season.

At a recent meeting of the organization, a temporary organization was affected and at a subsequent meeting held Tuesday evening, a committee on constitution and by-laws was appointed and the committee instructed to have their report ready for presentation to the members this evening for ratification, amendment or rejection.

The committee held a meeting last evening and drafted the laws to govern the business of the organization, and Temporary President M. A. Furrell, has called the meeting to ratify for this evening at the Arbitration Room in the Court House, at eight o'clock.

It is hoped that every member will be present at the meeting this evening, as there are some very important matters to be decided upon by the membership.

Every lover of clean sport in Clearfield should attend the meeting this evening. It is a step in the right direction and should result in many wholesome events being staged here this year.

The constitution and by-laws were framed by Messrs. L. A. Banta, A. Mitchell Chase, Esq., and G. A. Stewart.

RAIL RETURN WILL BRING MAN CUT

Officials Said To Be Planning For Dropping Of Many Red Tape Unwinders

CAN LAY OFF 100,000 MEN

WASHINGTON, Feb. 16—If the tentative plans of the railroad managers go through the return of the roads to private ownership on March 1 will clear the way for the dismissal of thousands of men added to the payrolls since the government took over the carriers in December, 1917.

The estimates of the number of men it will be possible to dispense with without lowering efficiency varies from 100,000 named by conservatives to thrice that number mentioned by others.

The programme is to squeeze out all whose employment can be credited up as a result of government operation, and incidental to what the railroad men say is the lowering of individual efficiency inseparable from government ownership or control.

How Payrolls Were Boosted

According to the figures submitted by Director General Hines to the Senate committee on Interstate Commerce, the number of railroad employees in December, 1917, was 1,703,684. In fifteen months, up to March, 1919, the last figures made

A DOUBLE HEADER IN BASKETBALL TOMORROW NIGHT

C. H. S. considers their basket ball team equal to any other quintet in the league, so when Reynoldsville informed the manager that sickness had left them with but one player, the game scheduled for Friday evening was called off. The Reynoldsville-Brookville game was called off last week on account of sickness, but having received no word from the former that they would be unable to play this week, Manager Ventres proceeded to advertise the expected game in his usual thorough manner.

Therefore, knowing that a great many local fans would be disappointed if the promised game were not forthcoming, Manager Ventres immediately got in touch with several schools, and in a few hours from the time of receiving Reynoldsville's notification, he had filled the open date. Houtzdale Union High happened to be free this week, so an arrangement was made whereby their five will play in the place of Reynoldsville. But Union High has a girls' team that has already won quite a reputation for itself, and when the girls heard that C. H. S. had a quintet of female basket tossers who were looking for a ga , they immediately issued a challenge. As result there will be a double-header staged in the local gym Friday evening.

Houtzdale is reported as having a very strong team with lots of speed and good team work. They have already defeated several strong teams and are now playing first class basket ball. With a game that promises so much in the line of good playing, and the added attraction of the first girls' game to be played on the High School floor, Clearfield fans will certainly not be disappointed in the evening's activities. It may not be a league game, but it will be full of league pep.

Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Bumgardner and children have been quite ill with scarlet fever.

A CALL TO PRAYER

"The World to Christ We Bring"

The Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions, and the Council of Women for Home Missions, unite in a call to Prayer, asking that the women of the churches observe the first Friday of the Lenten season, February 20, 1920, as a nation-wide Day of Prayer. In every city, town, hamlet and church the Day of Prayer is being observed. Clearfield is in line. The people of Clearfield are urged to meet in the Baptist church, at from 3 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, and at 7:30 in the evening, in order to join in union with all Evangelical denominations in America, and the Christian World, prostrate before God pleading in behalf of Missions, Home and Foreign.

Our best informed and most ardent missionary men and women will be on the program, and it promises to be the greatest Missionary service, in which all churches are united, ever held in Clearfield. A most urgent invitation is extended to the public. Come! It will be wonderful, and we believe helpful to all.

At the evening service an offering for the Near East Relief will be lifted. "We'll crowd thy gates with thankful songs."

This made the third death in the Davis family within a week, the mother and another son having passed away on Monday of last week. Mrs. Davis was formerly Elizabeth Pelton, of Morrisdale.

CONGRESS WRESTLING WITH [illegible] OF REPLACING DISABLED [illegible]

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—To determine whether a President is disabled to such an extent that he is unable to perform the duties of his office would be left to open official inquiry by the cabinet according to the terms of a bill introduced in the House today by Representative McAdam, of Illinois.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—A Congressional inquiry to determine exactly what steps should be taken to meet any further emergency caused by the serious and long continued illness of a Chief Executive probably will result from the action of Representative Fess of Ohio in introducing in the House a "presidential disability" amendment to the constitution. Pending a complete investigation by the House Judiciary committee on the constitutional and the legal aspects of the situation and the amendment he proposes. He is prepared to lay before the committee the result of the exhaustive study he made on this point. Democrats believe that this amendment is more of a political move in view of President Wilson's illness rather than to meet any emergency and for this reason passage of this or a similar one at this session of Congress appears unlikely. A two-thirds vote of both houses is necessary for the passage of the amendment. Fess is chairman of the Republican congressional Campaign committee.

INJUNCTION HALTS SACTIFICE SALE OF GERMAN SHIPS TO [illegible] FIRM

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19—A temporary injunction against the sale of ex-German passenger liners by the United States Shipping Board was granted today by Justice Bailey of the District of Columbia.

Hearing on the question will be held later, possibly some time next week. Bailey declared that the present laws give Congress or the President or any of his appointees no power to sell the ships. This question, Bailey said, was the only one raised by the government in opposing the sale.

"HEMLOCK SPECIAL" [illegible] GRAMPIANITE'S HARD [illegible]

We sort of promised ourselves some time since that we would refrain from further recording the weird wanderings of Supt. Johnson's Tyrone & Clearfield branch hemlock especial, but yesterday afternoon's happening jarred us loose from our resolution and we are forced to offend once again in this connection.

That infamous old string of derelict, dilapidated, dusty, dingy and disreputable passenger cars making up the "hemlock special" rolled out of Clearfield station yesterday at 1:15 for Tyrone on time—once. Everything was moving as easily and smoothly as one of Woodrow's nonstickable cabinets. The turn at the brewery was reached in due time and proper order but that is as far as this tale proceeds smoothly.

A passenger who got on the train at Grampian supporting himself on one side by one of those old-fashioned pump handle wooden legs got dry when he saw how dusty the brewery looked and started back to the water tank to endeavor to coax a drink out of the ancient water cooler. As "old peggy" reached the region of the tank the car took the curve and the passenger was tossed over against the side of the car. He came down pretty strong on his timber leg which was too much for the time-worn, worm eaten flooring and the business end of the "peg" continued on down through. The exploring hickory point stuck its nose right through the ancient hose into the mechanism of the air-brake coupling and despite the most strenuous efforts of its owner positively refused to be pulled out.

The train stopped [illegible] them it takes to fill [illegible] and the fun started. Woman Lawyer B. C.

That modern woman lawyers and even Portia celebrated from the "Merchant of Venice" had their prototypes in ancient days is the evidence to be found on ancient Babylonian tablets now preserved in the British museum. On these tablets it is given as a matter of interest that in the year 2000 B. C. a woman appeared in the high court of Babylon and pleaded her own cause without assistance from any man.

Memorial Day takes on a deeper and richer significance since we have added hundreds of veterans to the rolls of our dead and living defenders. The Progress would like to see a proper and fitting observance of the day and begs at this time to review to some extent the suggestions made last year. First, we believe that it will add to the pleasure of the occasion to hold the memorial exercises in the morning instead of the afternoon when the hot sun is beating down on bared heads of the crowds. Second, there are hundreds of people who would like to go to the cemetery to enjoy the exercises who cannot walk there in the heat of the day but who would go in the morning. Third, although the day is more than three months off it is not tooearly for the committee to line up at least one prominent and able speaker for the occasion. There is a great demand for able orators on this day and right now the committee can have the pick of the field. Fourth, the committee should recognize that the young people will demand the afternoon of the holiday for sports, entertainment and amusement and since it is most desirable that these young people be in attendance at the exercises there would seem to be only one way to have them there and that way is to hold the exercises in the morning.

There is in process of organization an association to be known as the Clearfield County Athletic Association. Its purpose is the promotion of sports of all kinds and the encouragement of clean athletics.

We believe that, properly directed, this organization can be the instrument of bringing adequate wholesome entertainment to the people of this community at a nominal cost and that it deserves the hearty support of every lover of baseball, skating, basket ball, boxing, wrestling and kindred sports.

Hearty support of its purposes does not mean financial support entirely but to get the thing going will require the attendance of every sport lover at the meeting called for tonight at which the constitution and bylaws will be presented for ratification. Of even greater importance is attendance at the election of officers to be held in the near future.

The organization is not for profitmaking and its every activity will be for the promotion of the best sporting events at the least cost.

Let every sportsman boost and let the knockers knock.

There has been general complaint about town relative to the speed and reckless manner in which one of the Atlanttic Refining Company's trucks is usually driven over the streets of Clearfield. On several occasions recently we saw this truck traveling up and down Second street at a gait and in a manner to cause spectators to marvel that it got by without accident. We mentioned the matter in The Progress last evening with the idea in mind that possibly this reckless driving was thoughtlessly done and the driver would take the hint and exercise more care and caution in the future.

We evidently sized our man up wrong as he is no doubt of the opinion he can drive over the streets to suit himself regardless of the rights of anybody or everybody else. He called the office this morning and asked what business it was of The Progress how he drove his truck. We have arranged to have Mayor Chase invite this young man to a session in the Mayor's office Friday evening next at 8 o'clocfl at which time and place we propose to tell him just what business it is of ours.

We believe this young man needs to be informed as to what his rights are, and also that the rest of the people of this community have some rights on the streets of the town. We do this in his interest as well as in the interest of the public welfare.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—In a base hospital at Neuilly, France, his face disfigured beyond recognition, an American soldier serving in the French army attracts attention by his deep despondency. Asked by the surgeons for a photograph to guide them in making over his face, he offers in derision a picture of the Savior, bidding them take that as a model. They do so, making a remarkable likeness.

CHAPTER II.—Invalided home, on the boat he meets Martin Harmon, New York broker, who is attracted by his remarkable features. The ex-soldier gives his name as "Henry Hilliard," and his home as Syracuse, New York. He left there under a cloud, and is embittered against his former fellow townsmen. Harmon makes him a proposition to sell mining stocks in Syracuse, concealing his identity. He accepts it, seeing in it a chance to make good and prove he has been underestimated.

CHAPTER III.—In Syracuse "Hilliard" (in reality Richard Morgan) is accepted as a stranger. He visits James Cullen, a former employer, relating a story of the death of Richard Morgan, and is surprised at the regret shown by Cullen and his youthful daughter Angela. While at the Cullen home Carol Durant, Morgan's former fiancee, makes a call.

CHAPTER IV.

She had always been, when he last saw her, the outstanding beauty of Syracuse, but he was astounded to behold what the interval of two years had done for her. She had taken upon herself a new maturity; her figure, exceptionally graceful, was still slender; but suggestive of a more womanly, a more inclusive charm.

He was being presented to her! He, who had kissed her a thousand times, was undergoing the ritual of presentation!—and she was smiling at him with those grave, sweet eyes of hers, and calling him by his adopted name! His mask of protection had never seemed so slight, so insufficient; the fragrance of her, and the illusion caused by this, threatened his balance and set his nerves on edge; fortunately, the routine of the conventions intervened to save him from his inarticulateness. For one thing, there was the rite of introduction to Armstrong, and after that there was a dash of promiscuous conversation, with not a little weather philosophy in it. Then came the inexorable hush caused by the presence of a stranger whose fads and fancies are still a matter of conjecture, and out of that hush, a question, and Hilliard was suddenly visited by a species of self-hypnosis.

If he had been moved at all by the sight of Angela, whom he had loved as a younger sister, he was, by comparison, shaken as by a whirlwind by the sight of Carol Durant, whom he had loved as a woman. Not on the train, not at the hotel, not even when he witnessed Angela's severe grief, had he remotely conceived that this instant would be so difficult to surmount. What in New York had seemed a regeneration, and earlier on this same evening had appeared a very dubious deception, was rapidly taking upon itself the color of irremediable wrong. His imagination was aroused beyond belief; and as he stared in dumb suspense at Carol, recalling a thousand episodes and a thousand privileges of the long ago, he was preyed upon by a slow-stealing grimness of despair which left him sick with misery.

She was waiting for an answer—and the others were waiting, too, and watching him. He felt that guilt was stamped on his every feature . . . he felt that every thought of his must be as crystal to the four who waited for him to speak.

He was himself and he was not himself; he was ostensibly Henry Hilliard, a man in whom it couldn't be suspected that the heart and soul of Dicky Morgan were embodied; he was transcendentalist; a spectator at his own funeral. Sight of the Croix de Guerre of poor Pierre Dutout, who in bequeathing that impressive bit of bronze to him, hadn't dreamed that he was leaving a heritage of chicanery along with it, engendered in Hilliard a thrill which nearly found its outlet in a paroxysm of wild laughter. And the newspaper, with Dutout's most genuine citation in it! And the old passport photograph which he had hidden for fear that his real name, indorsed on it, might be cabled home, together with proof to the world that he hadn't been a hero—that he had failed in this, as in every other undertaking of his life. And all the dates in accuracy! And if anyone cared to trace back the story, where was the flaw? Where was there a loophole? And who would recognize Dick Morgan in his cloak and mask of utter miracle?

Who had?

Lightninglike, his brain included all the salient items of the picture in a single flash. There was Dicky Morgan, sailing away to France—which could be proved. There was a number, and a name attached to it, and—since Hilliard's sturdy defense of

STOMACH SO BAD SHE HAD LOST ALL HOPE

Suffered agony for 8 years, and then got well in a hurry.

"I suffered from stomach trouble for 8 years—had acute indigestion for 4 years. All that time I have not slept a wink before 2 in the morning, and lived on milk and soup. My stomach was one solid sore.

"Doctors said I had catarrh and neuralgia of the stomach, also female trouble for which I needed an operation. I was nothing but a living skeleton and had given up hope.

"Then my husband brought home a bottle of Milks Emulsion. From the second dose, I began eating, and now, after 10 bottles, I eat anything I want. I haven't had a pain in my stomach since the first dose, and my female trouble is fast disappearing."—Mattie Cartwright, Tyler, Texas.

The blessed relief which Milks Emulsion gives in stomach trouble, is only part of its good work. The benefit is both prompt and lasting. It costs nothing to try.

Milks Emulsion is a pleasant, nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural bowel action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. It helps build flesh and strength, and is a powerful aid in resisting and repairing the effects of wasting diseases. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. Truly wonderful for weak, sickly children.

No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions and if not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.20 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold by druggists everywhere.

MEAT INJURIOUS TO THE KIDNEYS

Take a tablespoonful of Salts if Back hurts or Bladder bothers —Meat forms uric acid.

We are a nation of meat eaters and our blood is filled with uric acid, says a well-known authority, who warns us to be constantly on guard against kidney trouble.

The kidneys do their utmost to free the blood of this irritating acid, but become weak from overwork; they get sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and thus the waste is retained in the blood to poison the entire system.

When your kidneys ache and feel like lumps of lead, and you have stinging pains in the back, or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or the bladder is irritable, obliging you to seek relief during the night; when you have severe headaches, nervous and dizzy spells, sleeplessness, acid stomach or rheumatism in bad weather, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and nobody can make a mistake by taking a little occasionally to keep the kidneys clean and active.

public, the number increased 139,846 to 1,843,530. In this period on the Pennsylvania alone, the increase was in excess of 40,000, the number employed on the lines east of Pittsburgh increasing from 141,779 to 172,150, and on the lines west of Pittsburgh from 62,720 to 78,535.

Some of this increase was due to the extension of the eigth-hour day to shop and other employees, the men actually engaged in the operation of trains having been on that basis under private management. The balance of the increase, according to railroad men, represents the cost in efficiency of government administration

It is not pretended by the railroad men that this let-down in efficiency is peculiar to the railroads. They say it is to be found in all classes of labor, but that in none is it found to the extent manifested in their industry. So far as is humanly possible, they say, they purpose to get rid of it by dismissing superfluous or extra men wherever found and the abolition of superfluous jobs.

No Cut in Wages—Now

This cleaning up of the payrolls is urged as necessary if the roads are to be put back on a business basis. Otherwise, it is declared, it will be impossible to get anything like old-time efficiency.

That these plans have been under consideration for some time past is admitted by railroad officials. They deprecate publicity at this time and rather resent reports circulating in Wall street for weeks that the roads propose to "liquidate labor." These reports, it is asserted, are unfortunate in that they serve to give the impression of an intention to reduce wages. This is not at this time under consideration, though there is the highest authority for saying that something akin to it is under consideration of some managers.

This something is reclassification of employes. Under the administration of the railroads by the government the tendency has been to classify labor upward. By this is meant that employees, rated as laborers or something a little better and paid accordingly have had their wages increased not by increasing the rates for their classification, but by putting them in higher classes. In this way, it is now pointed out, the appearance of increasing wages was avoided, but the effect was obtained.

This in itself, railroad men now assert, is responsible for much of the inefficiency and not a little of the dissatisfaction on the part of the more skilled employees. Many who have spent long apprenticeships and acquired a high degree of skill at their trades have resented the wiping out of differentials between them and less skilled men and also the inclusion in their ratings of men not of their skill. In these circumstances, railroad men say, a let up in efficiency and in production has been inevitable.

There is also a question if the management of some of the smaller roads in the less densely populat d sections of the country, where living costs are not to be compared with those in congested centres, will not seek for some way in which they can avoid paying the present high rates under the standard classifications put into effect by the government. It is, they assert, unfair to compel a poor road with small earnings to pay the same for work in a Vermont town, where living costs are low, as larger roads with high earnings are asked to pay in congested centres like New York or Chicago, where living costs are high.

This, however, is a question that, for the present, will be permitted to wait in the hope that some way out short of a reduction that will be sure to involve labor troubles, can be found. One posible way is for these roads to allow the present wage rates for old employees to stand, but paying lesser rates to such new men as may be put on from time to time.

Labor Makes no Protest

That the roads contemplate a reduction in forces is well understood in labor circles. Oddly enough, in some labor quarters the necessity of those interested in the management that there are many superfluous employees on the payrolls is confirmed.

"The rolls have been padded," said well known labor man asserted today, "by managers interested mainly in making government management appear impossible than in actually running their roads. There are railroad yards where there are many yardmasters than there are yard hands. Men have been placed in many places just to take care of them, and at the same time discredit the system. These men should go—they never should have been employed.

"The roads have also taken advantage of the fact that Uncle Sam is paying the bills to do a lot of things they should have done when the properties were privately managed. They won't continue to do this work. This leaves the way open for the laying off of other men. The fact that the roads go back in better shape than when they were taken over will allow for the laying off of more men.

"It is absolutely unfair for the roads to cary ink cincy now when that and not efficiency is what they sought in the period of government control."

NEWS OF OUR NEIGHBORS

CURWENSVILLE

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Young, at their home on South Side, the day this week, a daughter.

John Eckert, wife and child, residing near Naulton, are all down suffering from an attack of the influenza, bordering on pneumonia.

In glancing over an old paper, from a volume of The Clearfield County Times, printed in this place in January, 1873, we noticed a paragraph reading as follows: "For several days snow has been falling steadily, and measuring it with what was already on the ground, the depth is a trifle over four feet. Timber sticks and logs in the woods are hidden from sight and it is almost an impossibility to locate them, thereby retarding those who have long timber, in getting it to the river. Previous to this last snow fall, it was not an uncommon sight to see one hundred teams passing down Main street in the late afternoon, each hauling from one to three sticks of timber to the landing place along the banks of the river, in the meadow above the wooden creek bridge, and from the Susquehanna House to below Arnoldtown. Huge piles of spruce lumber are being landed on the river bank below the Irvin grist mill, on the east shore of the stream. It is estimated that there are already two hundred rafts at their landing places, and just as soon as men and teams can get into the woods, fifty more rafts will be hauled to the river, ready for "rafting in" as soon as the river is clear from ice in the spring It is almost impossible for the folks living in the country to get to town for provisions and feed for their stock, as most of the roads are drifted full, some of them with twenty feet of snow, and it will take days to shovel a passage way through them. George Merrill, who is logging on the creek near Home Camp, was in town this week, and gave out the information that all work on his job was suspended, owing to the snow being so deep that it covered up all the logs in the woods, and that shovels would have to be used before they could be reached."

Do not forget citizens that tonight at 7:30 o'clock there will be a regular meeting of the Industrial and Community Association. All persons who are interested in the movement for the betterment of the town, should make it a point to be present and hear the reports of the different committees, who have "let no grass grow under their feet" the past couple of weeks. The McKinley orchestra will be present and enliven the meeting with excellent music. Even though you do not wish to join the association, go to the meeting and hear what is being done for you and your town, by those who are interested and determined to place the name of Curwensville in a conspicuous place on the map.

Alfred Long, one of the town's aged and highly esteemed citizens, is able to be around again and receive the congratulations of his friends. A few weeks ago this venerable old gentleman had the misfortune of falling down a stairway, turning two somersaults in his descent, and alighting on his head and shoulders, and sustaining other severe bruises on his body, from which, owing to his age and feebleness, many thought his recovery doubtful.

The Progress man here has been confined to his home all of the week and from all indications looks like a "shut-in" for the balance of the week. He is engaged in writing up a history of the town and its people, from the beginning until the present time.

DARKTOWN COLORED SOCIETY CIRCLES UPSOT

Wrigley Addition's creme de la creme of "Darktown Society," to the number of at least twenty-five, attended a spirited assault and battery hearing at 'Squire Chorpenning's court yesterday afternoon. The principals were colored ladies. It was sure some case, the evidence at times hitting the high places.

The "judge" with Solomon-like wisdom, after listening to the diametrically opposite stories of the contending sides, decided that each contestant was equally guilty and divided the costs. The disputants and their friends retired from the field dissatisfied, both sides declaring the end was not yet.

Offensive Breath Caused By Catarrh

MU-COL Best to Keep Down Odor And Restore Diseased Membranes to Normal

Doctors all over this country have used and prescribed MU-COL in severe catarrhal conditions of the mucous membranes of nose and throat. In some cases the noses had been stopped up for long periods; crusts had formed and mucous collected in cavities from which is ought normally to have been discharged.

Raw sore throats often resulted; the eyes became weak and watery; the breath foul, while the sense of smell was gradually disappearing.

The MU-COL method of treatment which is extremely easy to apply, quickly shows a decided improvement. All the disagreeable symptoms rapidly disappear. The eyes, the nose and the throat soon become free and clear because there is no more inflammation and Catarrh germs to cause it.

Don't delay. Get a bottle of MU-COL today and take pity on that Catarrh infested nose and throat.

All first-class druggists can supply you.

Thousands of Women

Owe Their Health To

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—overwhelming indeed is the success of this great medicine. Compared with it, all other medicines for women's ills seem to be experiments.

Why is it so successful? Simply because of its sterling worth. For over forty years it has had no equal. Women for two generations have depended upon it with confidence.

Thousands of Their Letters are on our files, which prove these statements to be facts, not mere boasting.

Here Are Two Sample Letters:

Mother and Daughter Helped.

Middleburg, Pa.—"I am glad to state that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me much good when I was 35 years old. I was run down with female trouble and was not able to do anything, could not walk for a year and could not work. I had treatment from a physician but did not gain. I read in the papers and books about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. The first few bottles gave me relief and I kept on using it until I got better and was able to do my work. The Vegetable Compound also regulated my daughter when she was 15 years old. I can recommend Vegetable Compound as the best medicine I have ever used."—Mrs. W. YERGER, R. 3, Box 21, Middleburg, Pa.

Fall River, Mass.—"Three years ago I gave birth to a little girl and after she was born I did not pick up well. I doctored for two months and my condition remained the same. One day one of your little books was left at my door and my husband suggested that I try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it immediately and I felt better and could eat better after the first bottle, and I continued taking it for some time. Last year I gave birth to a baby boy and had a much easier time as I took the Vegetable Compound for four months before baby came. On getting up I had no pains like I had before, and no dizziness, and in two weeks felt about as well as ever."—Mrs. THOMAS WILKINSON, 288 Columbia Street, Fall River, Mass.

Hot Water Each Morning Puts Roses in Your Cheeks

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incombustible material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, forms toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Girls and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

Women who desire to enhance the beauty of their complexion should just try this for a week and notice results.

Dicky Morgan had had a grain of truth in it, and one of the steps of his many sided progress carefully omitted—a name had really been assumed, and had endured from the date of enlistment to the date of discharge. It was the individual's recorded name in the army and at Neuilly—and it wasn't Morgan and it wasn't Hilliard and it wasn't Dutout. No one here knew it, or ever would know it; even Harmon didn't know it; it was the first sobriquet of a shell-torn individual who had been taken to Neuilly, and had been made whole again. No one at Neuilly had ever set eyes on Dicky Morgan's real face! But a certain man named Dutout had been decorated and died, and that could be proved—was proved! Hilliard had borrowed Dutout's name in perfect safety; and the trail was cold. And here was a fourth man, Hilliard—to take his word for it—and the world is larger than the curiosity of sincere people to encompass.

No—if a Neuilly surgeon ever told as one of the mysterious chapters of the war what had happened to a certain gloomy individual that summer, the name would suggest nothing. And as far as checking up the visits of a mythical Hilliard to a very real Dutout was concerned, who would profess to remember? The testimony of any single witness would be immaterial.

The voice of Carol Durant was echoing in Hilliard's ears, and Hilliard, yielding to a tidal wave of recklessness, and of swelling anger at imaginary wrongs, looked squarely into Carol's eyes, and spoke with winning urgency

"Yes," he said. "I have news of Morgan. In fact, I'm here in Syracuse solely because I have it. I've just been telling Mr. Cullen—and Miss Cullen—that I was with him when he died."

She didn't speak, at first; she merely looked at Hilliard and grew very white, and her lips quivered. Presently she swayed a little, and reached out with her hand toward the back of a convenient chair. Armstrong stepped toward her, and Angela Cullen slipped an arm around her waist.

"He's . . . dead?" she repeated, and her tone was not yet free from a certain incredulity, as though the fact were of itself impossible, and the statement of it subject to discussion.

"Yes, Miss Durant."

She moistened her lips; her eyes were very bright, unnaturally bright, so that Hilliard was fascinated, and appalled.

"You . . . You know that?" she asked, again with that queer inflexion of armored doubt.

"Yes, I know it."

The others were standing as statues; Mr Cullen, snatching at the first idea of consolation to present itself, fumbled for his daughter's other hand, which still retained the trophy a better man had won.

"Here's what they gave him, Carol! Look! The Croix de Guerre! Don't let's think of anything but what he . . . let's be proud of him! I—"

"Oh, yes," she said inertly, and took the cross in her palm. She dropped her eyes for a moment, then raised them to the level of Hilliard's. "Didn't he send some word to me?"

"No." Hilliard's nod was very ministerial. "No, I'm sorry, but—"

Her eyebrows lifted, and her nostrils dilated the merest trifle. Her breath was coming more rapidly now; she was nearing the breaking point of her resistance, and all of them knew it. The moment was agonizedly prolonged. Hilliard, gazing without a quaver at the girl he had thought he loved beyond all else in this world or the next, was singularly relaxed as he observed her symptoms. She had really cared, then . . . so much the greater pity that she hadn't kept him caring . . . as she might.

"Can that be possible?" she said, hardly above a whisper.

"I'm sorry—but—"

"I wouldn't have believed it could be true." She gave a long, tremulous breath, and looked about her, half-dazed and half-perceptive. Her eyes strayed back to Hilliard. "Tell me about it," she said, almost inaudibly.

"Carol, dear!" Angela was stimulated to active sympathy. "Sit down—please! Oh, Mr. Hilliard!"

"No—yes, I . . . I'll sit down!" Her eyes seemed magnetized to Hilliard's. "Only I want to hear—I want to hear!"

"Tell her from the beginning," said Cullen, mopping his forehead. Get a glass of water . . . anything else, Carol?"

She shook her head. "Tell me!" she said. "I want to know!"

So that Hilliard, inspirited by the realization that he was under the protectorate of the shadows, and gathering fresh assurance with every sentence, went through that tragic narrative a second time. And as he told the tale of Dicky Morgan, he was greatly engulfed by the surge of Dicky Morgan's grievances; his voice trembled with righteousness; he gradually lost his loathing for the part he played, and played it with every atom of his energy; he was a defendant, and a witness and a judge for Dicky Morgan all in one—and his verdict was for acquittal. Miss Durant's eyes never left his face.

"And that," she said presently, "is all there is to tell?"

"That's the end," said Hilliard simply. And in the long hiatus which followed, he was wondering . . . wondering . . . vague aimless thoughts, with no beginning and no conclusive outcome, but the central figure, flitting, elusive, was always Carol Durant. He told himself fiercely that he hated her, that for two vengeful years he had hated her, that he had come back to Syracuse primarily to see her again, with his whole soul for the wounds in his heart, the wounds of his body, still . . . O God! why couldn't the surgeons have cut away his memory, and left him peace!

He was prodigiously relieved when Mr. Cullen, well-meaning but awkward, burted out a paradox of eulogy. Armstrong, eager to relieve the congested ways of thought, ventured into the realm of platitude—and something in his manner caught Hilliard's attention. The man was actually possessive—and Hilliard, having no envy of his possession, cursed him on general principles nevertheless. And then Hilliard was again in demand; there was a flood of incoherent questioning, and he was giving details, answering queries, volunteering information which might never have been asked, describing Neuilly, the hospital, the surgeons, the nurses, the wholly indescribable atmosphere of France in wartime. He was strengthening his position, phrase by phrase; his insouciance redoubled; he had laid a rock foundation never to be successfully assailed. There came an abrupt pause; Miss Durant rose and came to him, and he was on his feet to meet her.

"Thank you," she said, giving him her hands. His heart missed a beat; his blood ran gelid. "Thank you. If you can . . I wish you'd talk to me again before you go . . . alone . . . I wish it very much. You've made me . . . at least, I can be glad you were there . . . to help him, but I want to know so much more . . . so infinitely much more . . ."

A fleeting impulse clawed at Hilliard's judgment; he yielded to it blindly. It meant the alteration of his plan of action, it meant a trifle more of danger; and a gratuitous risk at that, but it was genius—genius!

"Miss Durant!" He made sure that the others were beyond the range of his voice. "Miss Durant! I said he sent no word to you; that was true as far as I knew the truth, but there's one letter he started to write—just at the last . . . it wasn't addressed to anyone; I didn't know who it was for. I brought it with me on the chance that I'd find out. I didn't want to speak of it before every one, because if it's yours, I thought you'd . . . you understand, don't you? I'm almost positive it was meant for you. It's only a few lines . . . he wasn't ever strong enough to finish it . . . I've got it at the hotel now. May I bring it to you tomorrow?"

"Miss Durant!"

She held her breath for an instant; her mouth quivered. She looked at him searchingly.

"Surely. I . . . I live just across on the corner, Mr. Hilliard. The brick house. Can you come early?"

"How soon?" He was telling himself that his former passions were atrophied; she was no longer able to disquiet him. His inspiration was commercial—strictly commercial.

"In the morning? At . . . eleven?"

"I'll come gladly."

"And . . . and I want to thank you now," she said in a tone which would have fallen as a blessing upon the ears of any other man alive, "for speaking as though you loved him. And for all you did for him. Perhaps you know already . . . perhaps you can't know . . . but I'm trying to tell you, because he was . . . he was one of my very dearest friends."

His brain snapped; he bent down to her.

"You loved him—too?" he said, uncontrollably.

"Yes," she said. "Once—I loved him, too!"

IN DURANCE

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union)

The youngest operative of the Fidelity Detective agency, Paul Dacre, felt quite complimented when his chief called him into his private office and said:

"Dacre, we want you to handle a case that may require considerable skill and care. There is a contingent fee of five thousand dollars, and if you succeed you get a 25 per cent bonus."

"I shall try to do my best," pledged Dacre, as his superior exhibited a photograph.

"That is a picture of Philip Norcom," proceeded the chief. "He lives at 22 Weller street, in a lonely old house. Once a week he leaves the house and goes to an art store, where he disposes of a newly made water-color sketch."

"And this Norcom is wanted?"

"Not at all. Here is the point. A young lady, Miss Viola Burt, has disappeared from the home of her guardian. She is somewhere in hiding. This Norcom is a former clerk of her dead father, from whom she inherited quite an estate. The presumption is that Norcom is keeping her in concealment. This is the young lady in question," and the chief produced the photo of an exquisitely beautiful young girl.

"We have had three men on the case, and all have blundered. Their object was to get into the house, to see if the young lady was an occupant. Number one spread some molasses on a sheet of heavy paper to paste it to a cellar window and smash his way in without making a noise. Number two bribed a man hired to clean a rug to roll him up in it and carry him into the house. Number three watched from the looped-up awning of a little store opposite, and picklocked the front door one midnight. All three, in turn, roamed over the house, from cellar to garret, and found no man—no girl.

"Then there is some secret, shut-off compartment, you think?" began Dacre.

"I don't think at all. That is for you to find out and act upon. You've got the points at issue. Find the girl, if she is there, and try to locate her elsewhere if Norcom knows where she is."

Dacre watched 22 Weller street for three days and nights, and all that time it did not show a sign of life. One night the original of the first photograph came out, a small package under his arm. Dacre trailed him to an art shop, saw him deliver the parcel, receive some money, and shadowed him back to the old mansion. Five evenings later, when the man started out on his regular mission, Dacre managed to force his way into the house, went all over it, and discovered not the slightest evidence of furnishment or occupancy.

Dacre came outside and crouched behind a fence. When Norcom returned he entered the house as usual, locking himself in. Dacre watched out for a light within the structure. None showed. Then a long shadow momentarily flitted across the side yard.

"The roof!" commented Dacre. All was now clear to him. The old building was a blind, and simply an avenue to an adjoining building.

It was an hour later when Dacre crossed that same roof, lifted a scuttle in one adjoining, and descended a ladder. He groped his way towards a light showing under a door, was suddenly seized from behind, a banded loop of steel encircled both wrists; he was pushed against the door, past it, and realized that he had stumbled into a trap. He saw a girl seated at an easel—she of the photograph. The man Norcom forced him past her into another room having barred windows, and Dacre found himself a helpless captive.

It was the next morning when the girl brought him his breakfast. He tried valuly to engage her in conversation. Norcom entered the room.

"Young man," he said austerely, "you are to remain here a prisoner for six days."

It was not until the third day that the young lady deigned to speak with Dacre. After that they became quite well acquainted. She even allowed him to sit in the room where she was engaged in her artistic labors. One day he recited frankly his connection with the case. She smiled wisely and, Dacre fancied, rather triumphantly.

"You will be glad when you know what underlies this search for me," she said, and Dacre, captivated by her grace and beauty, hoped so, too.

"We will go with you," announced Philip Norcom, the morning of the seventh day. He released his captive, led the way to the street and, hailing a taxicab, added quietly: Give your directions. We are your guests now."

It was to the chief that Norcom addressed himself when they arrived at his office. "It has been my privilege," he said, "to assist in hiding Miss Burt from her scheming guardian, who sought to divert her fortune, and I have succeeded. This day she is twenty-one and her own mistress; now she can defy an evil plotter who might have connived at her death, for all we know."

The guardian did not pay the opulent amount he had promised, so Paul Dacre did not share in the anticipated reward. He was better paid, however, for the acquaintance formed in durance blossomed into friendship, and that in time into love, which led Viola and himself to the altar.

ONE JAPANESE CUSTOM WHICH HAD BETTER NOT BE IMPORTED

Ex Oriente Lux! It was a Roman wiseacre who first observed the fact that from the East comes light.

A dispatch from Tokio anounces that the Mikado has sent a generous gift of large casks of sake to Prince Kuni and Marquis Hachisuka, who who recently lost their residences through fires of unknown origin. This, the dispatch further says, is an ancient custom, and many noblemen of high rank followed the Emperor's example. Considering the fact that sake—they call it "sakky" in Tokio—is somewhere around 15 per cent in its most popular alcoholic form, this is really SOME custom!

To grasp the full beauty of it, you need only translate it into American terms. Were the custom adopted in this country, you might read in the newspapers a few items like these:

"AKRON, Ohio—Zeb Jenk's house having burned down mysteriously during the night, the Mayor of Akron sent him a barrel of rye. The Board of Aldermen voted to send him six case of Bacardi rum."

"SYRACUSE, N. Y.—A fire of mysterious origin destroyed the home of Franklin Pooch, secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, yesterday. Governor Smith telegraphed his condolences and sent Mr. Pooch a few jugs of applejack.

"The City Council meets tomorrow and will probably send him some champagne."

The possibilities of this custom stagger the imagination. One thought alone rises clearly in the bewildered mind, viz: What would become of the fire insurance companies?

COURT NOTES

Divorce actions were begun in the Prothonotary's office yesterday, by Attorney A. H. Woodward, in the following cases:

William Smiley asks a divorce from his wife, Susan Smiley, whom he married February 3rd. 1881, and who deserted him August 16, 1916.

Florence May Hile, who alleges she was forced to leave her home on account of the cruel and barbarous treatment and abuse accorded her by her husband, Dean L. Hile. The Hiles were married October 3, 1917, and the wife was forced to quit on February 5, 1920.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Look young! Nobody can tell if you use Grandmother's simple recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at a small cost.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Tell Your Phone

Just tell your 'phone what you want from the drug store. We are on the other end of the wire capable of understanding your needs, fully capable of selecting your wants, and delivering them immediately. Telephone trading is a time-saving, bother-saving method. We are willing to do the delivering, if you are willing to give us your orders that way. We guarantee this service correct.
